

ARCHIVE C

Spencer 2 Spring: The Archive
Zoe Braybrook
Level 3

1.0 INDIVIDUAL REFLECTION

The key idea of my archive is to be a city garden allowing natural elements to infiltrate certain spaces and areas. This is the site plan overall I wanted the footprint to not take up too much space allowing for a lot of public open space.

As a follow on from Carlton gardens which are close by I think one of the greatest civic offerings is public open space especially in the CBD.

Release from the stress of the city. I wanted the building to have a stress free kind of easy navigation feel to it rather than an overwhelming presence.

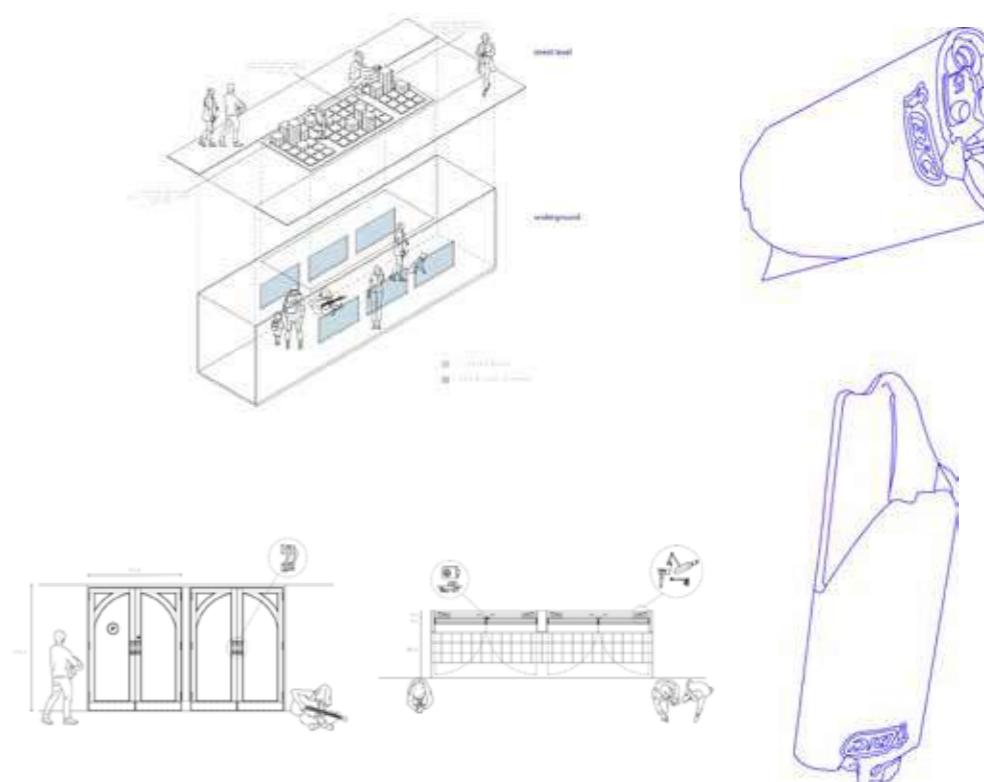

With this I thought about the qualities of a sense of inclusiveness and visibility to the general public and how this could be created through architectural form.

One of the main ways this is done is allowing the entirety of the archive space to be elevated above ground level. With small points of access to each major volume, rather than one large grand entrance having visibility of internal activity and to a certain degree a sense of predictability to the program and functionality of the building however still allowing for individual exploration and discovery.

and this idea corresponds to the glass corridors connecting each mass where a different element or function is revealed through the journey.

The key re imaginations focused on in my final design all had a sense of foreshadowing or initiated purpose, allowing for the audience to have somewhat of an understanding of the functional systems of the building before actually being inside.

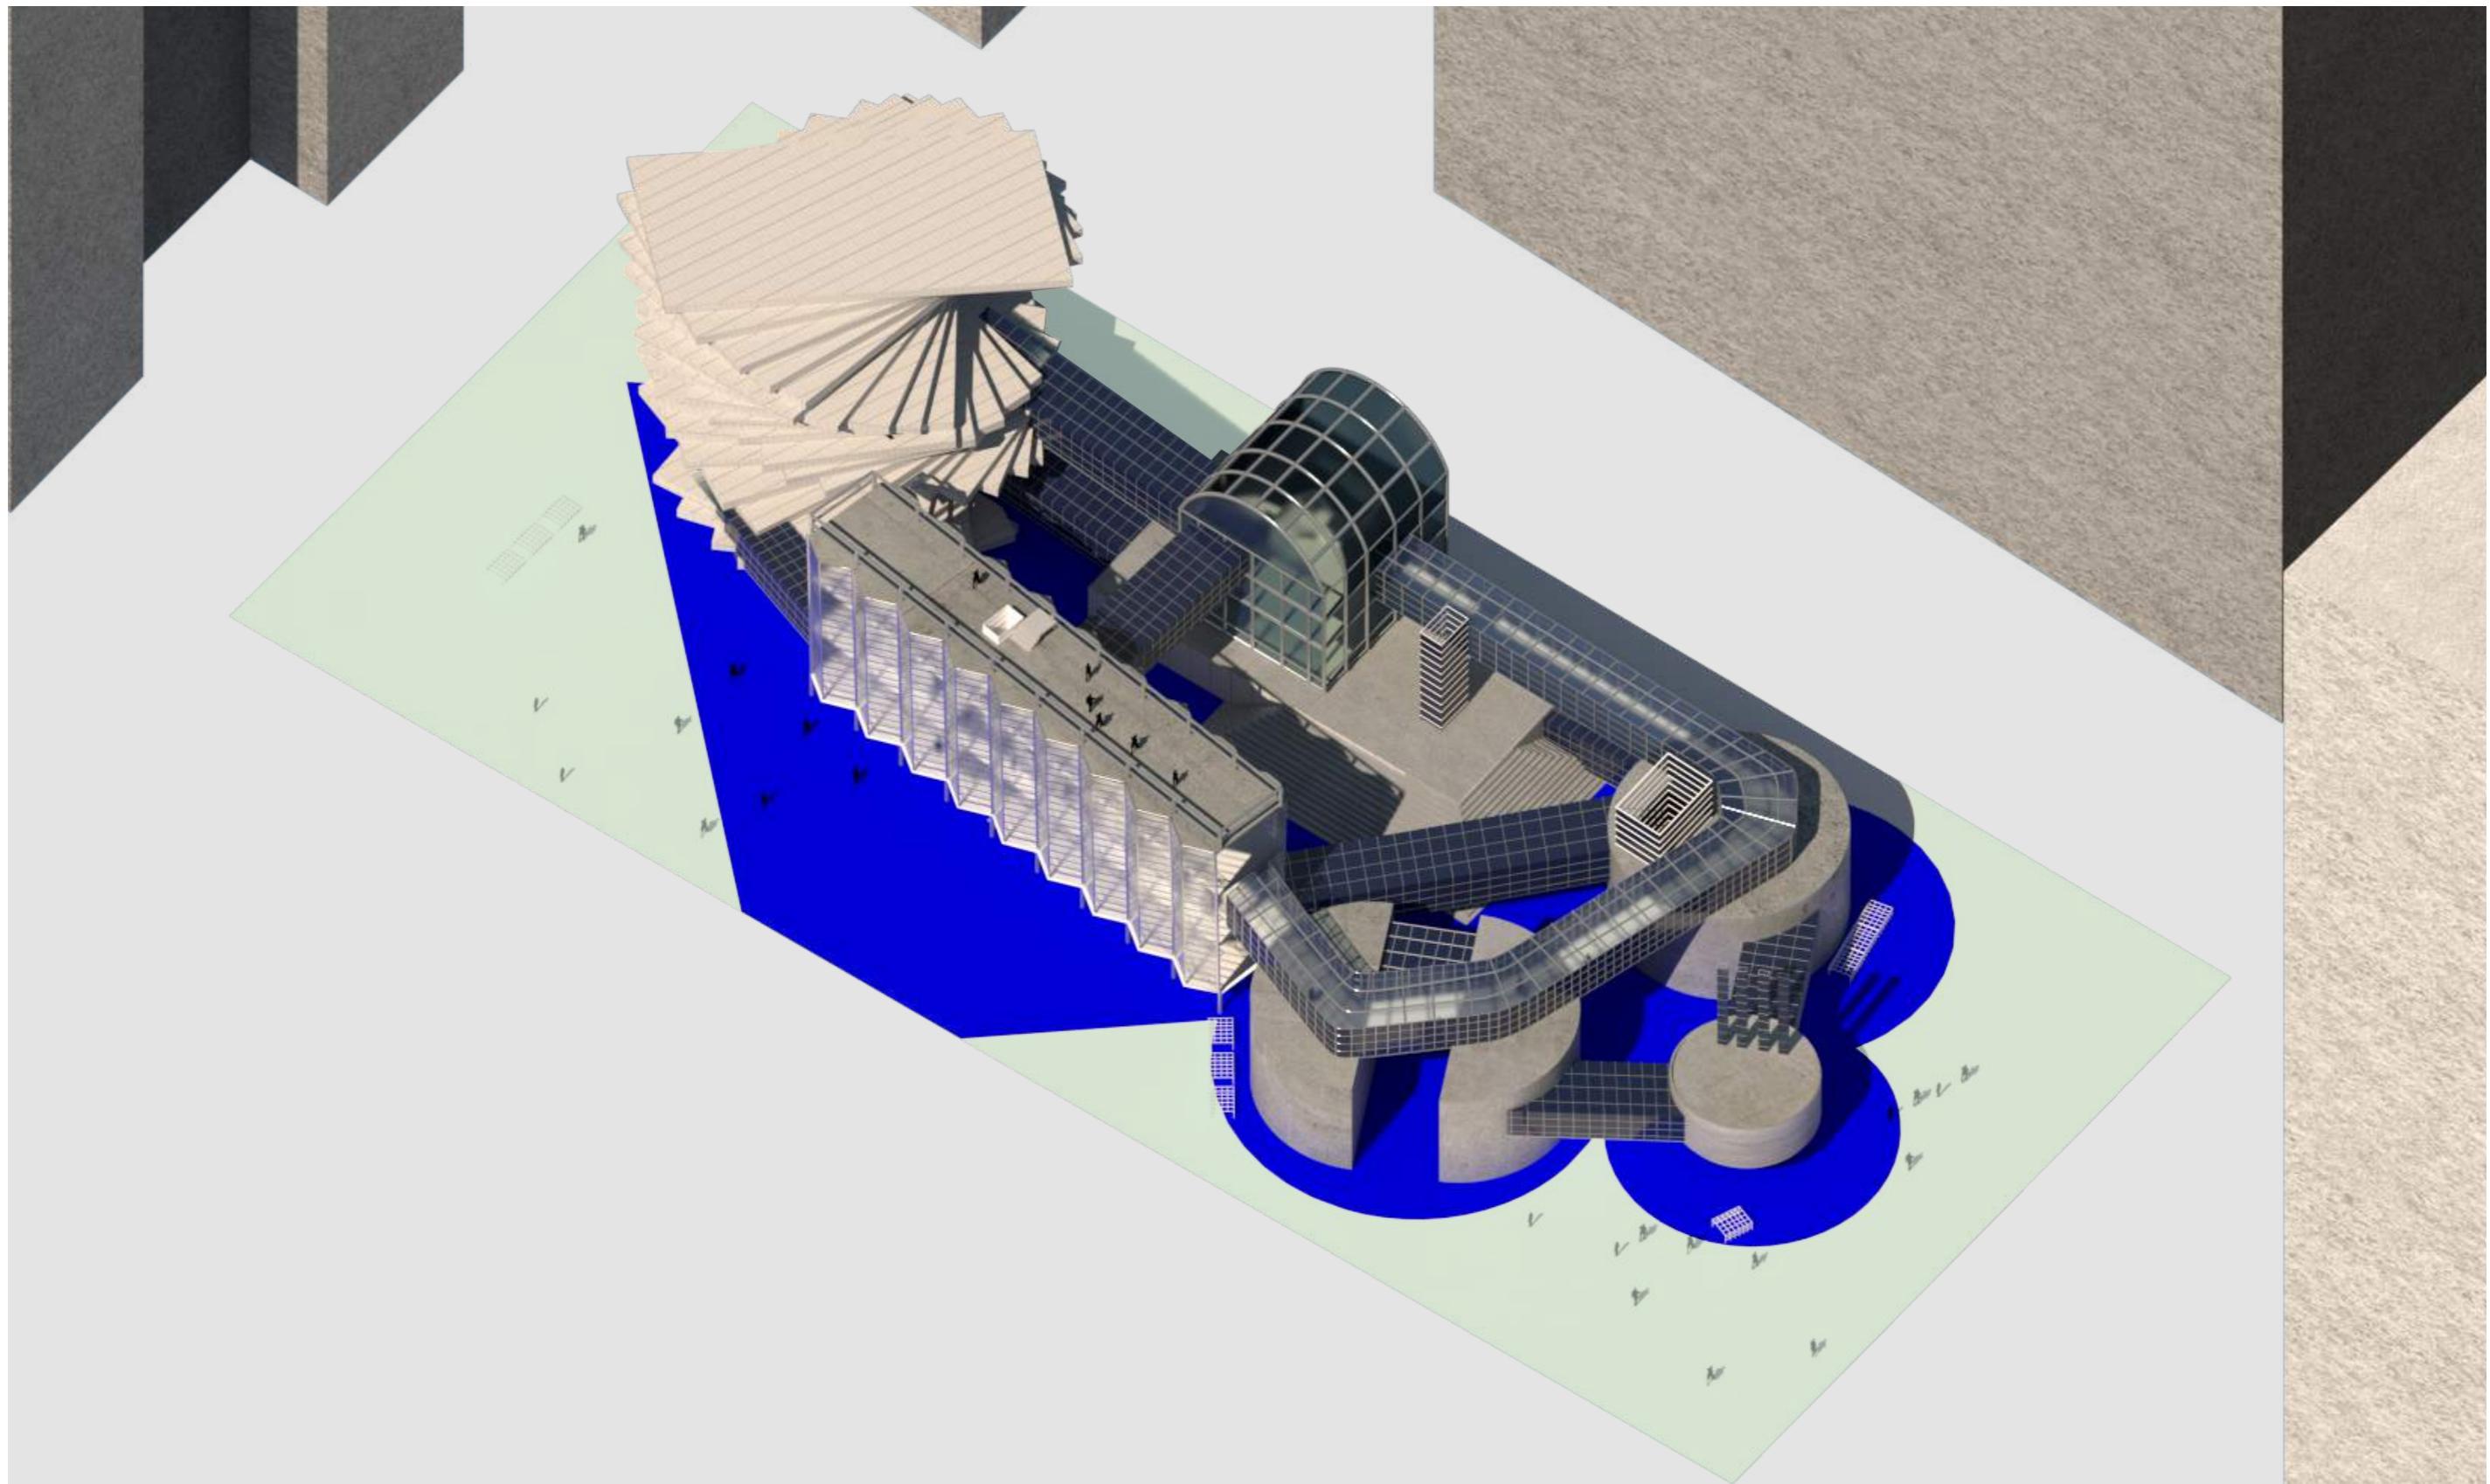

S

(YOUR NAME HERE)
2.0 YOUR PROJECT NAME

S

S

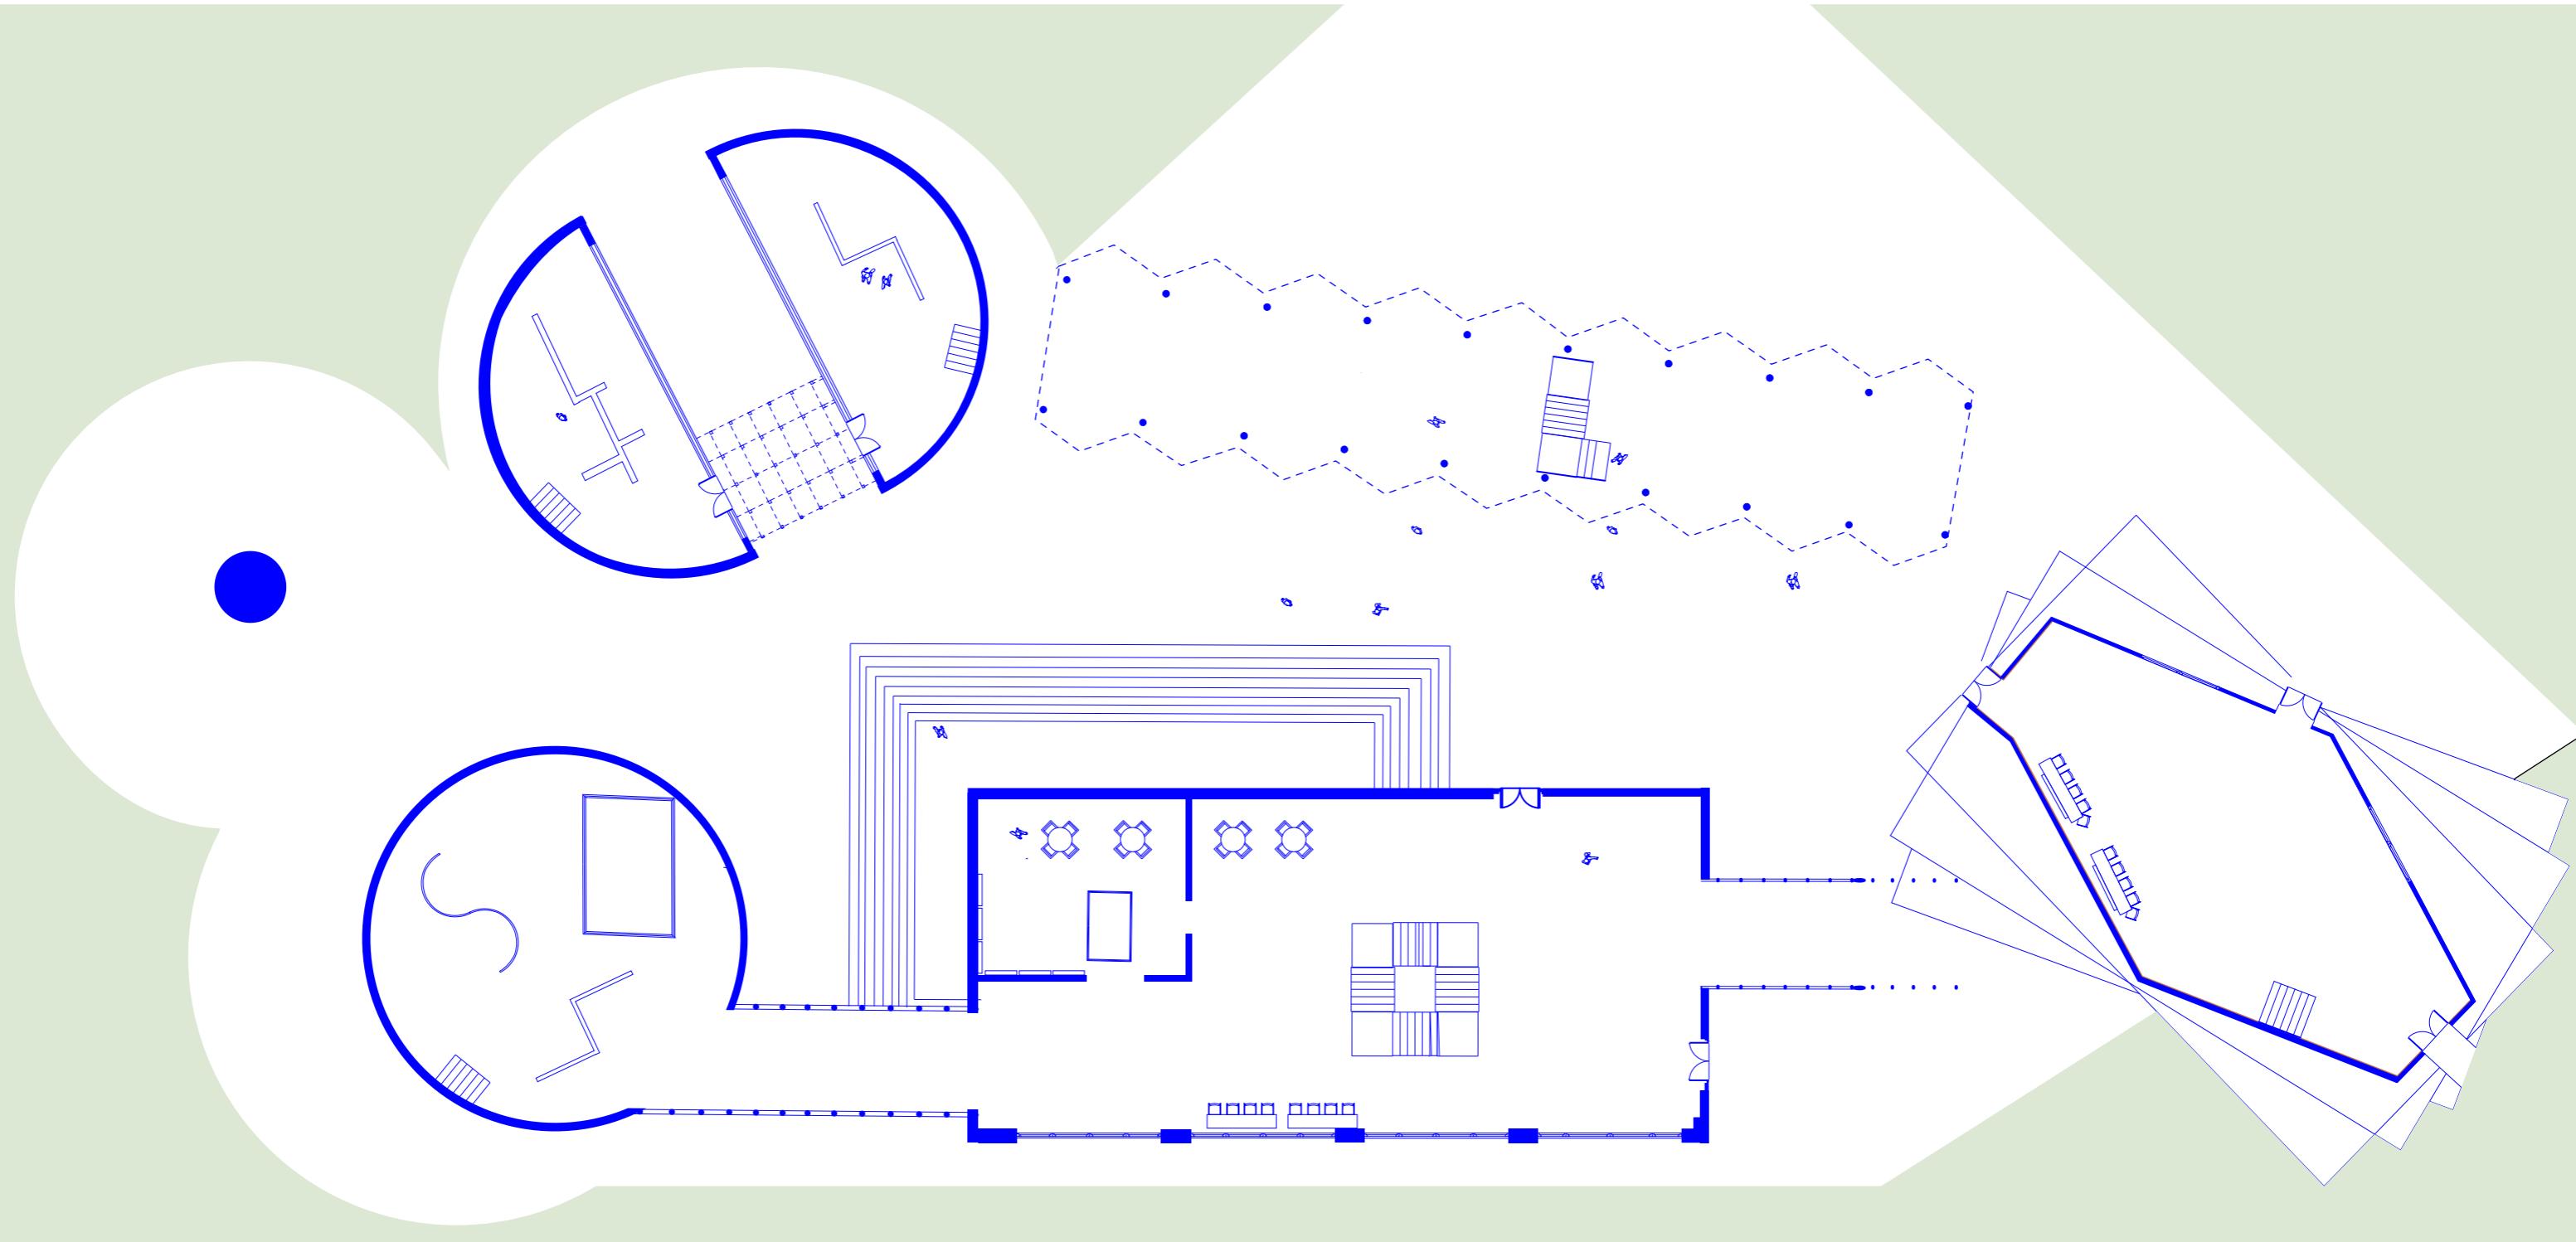

Zoe Braybrook
ARCHIVE C

Axonometric View

S

S

Ground Floor Plan 1:200@A3

S

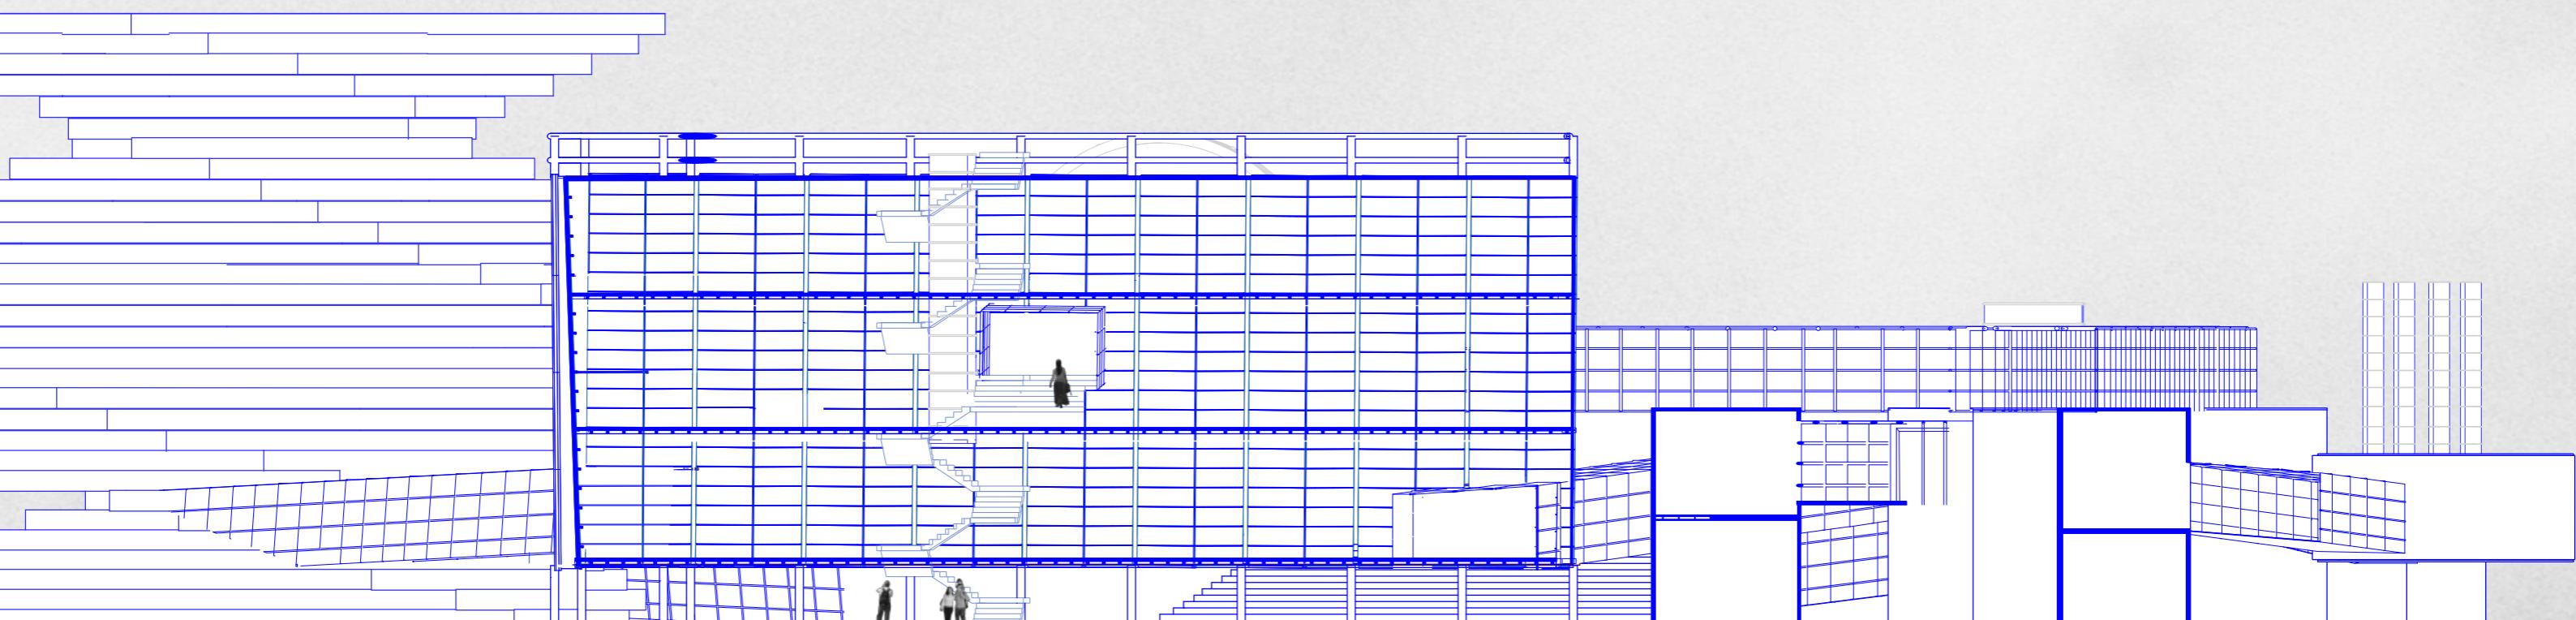

S

Section A 1:200@A3

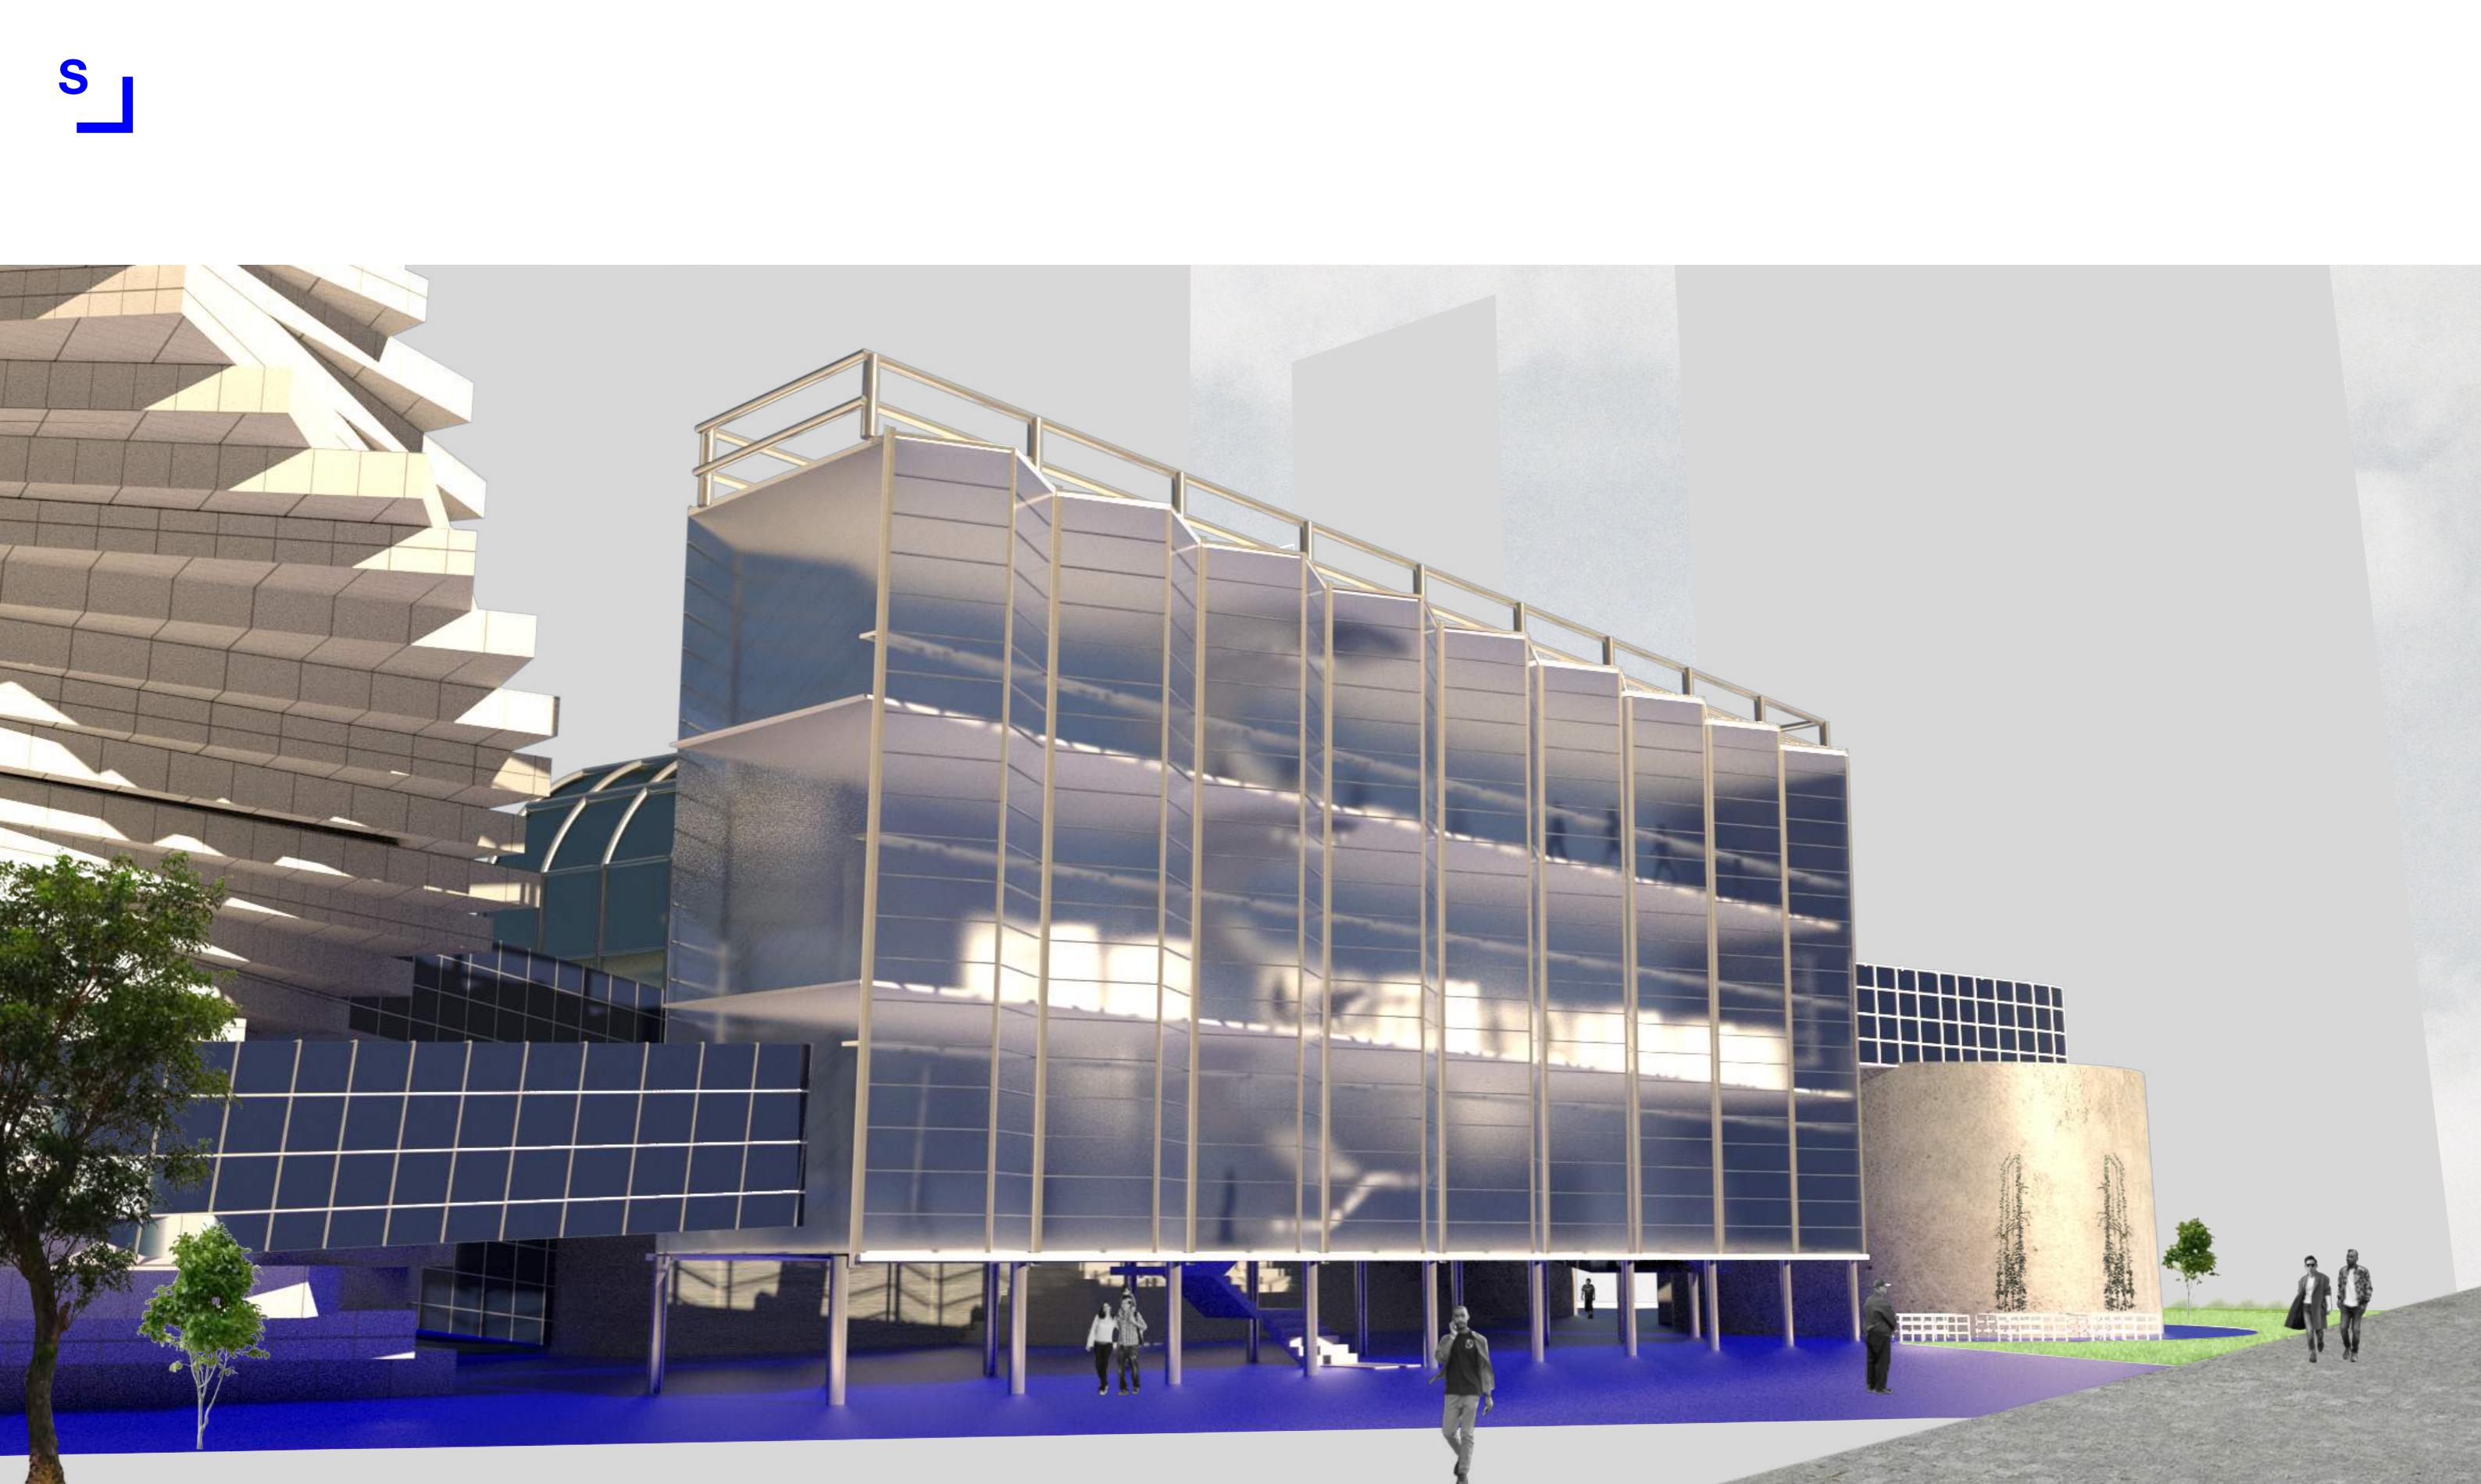

S

S

Section B 1:200@A3

S

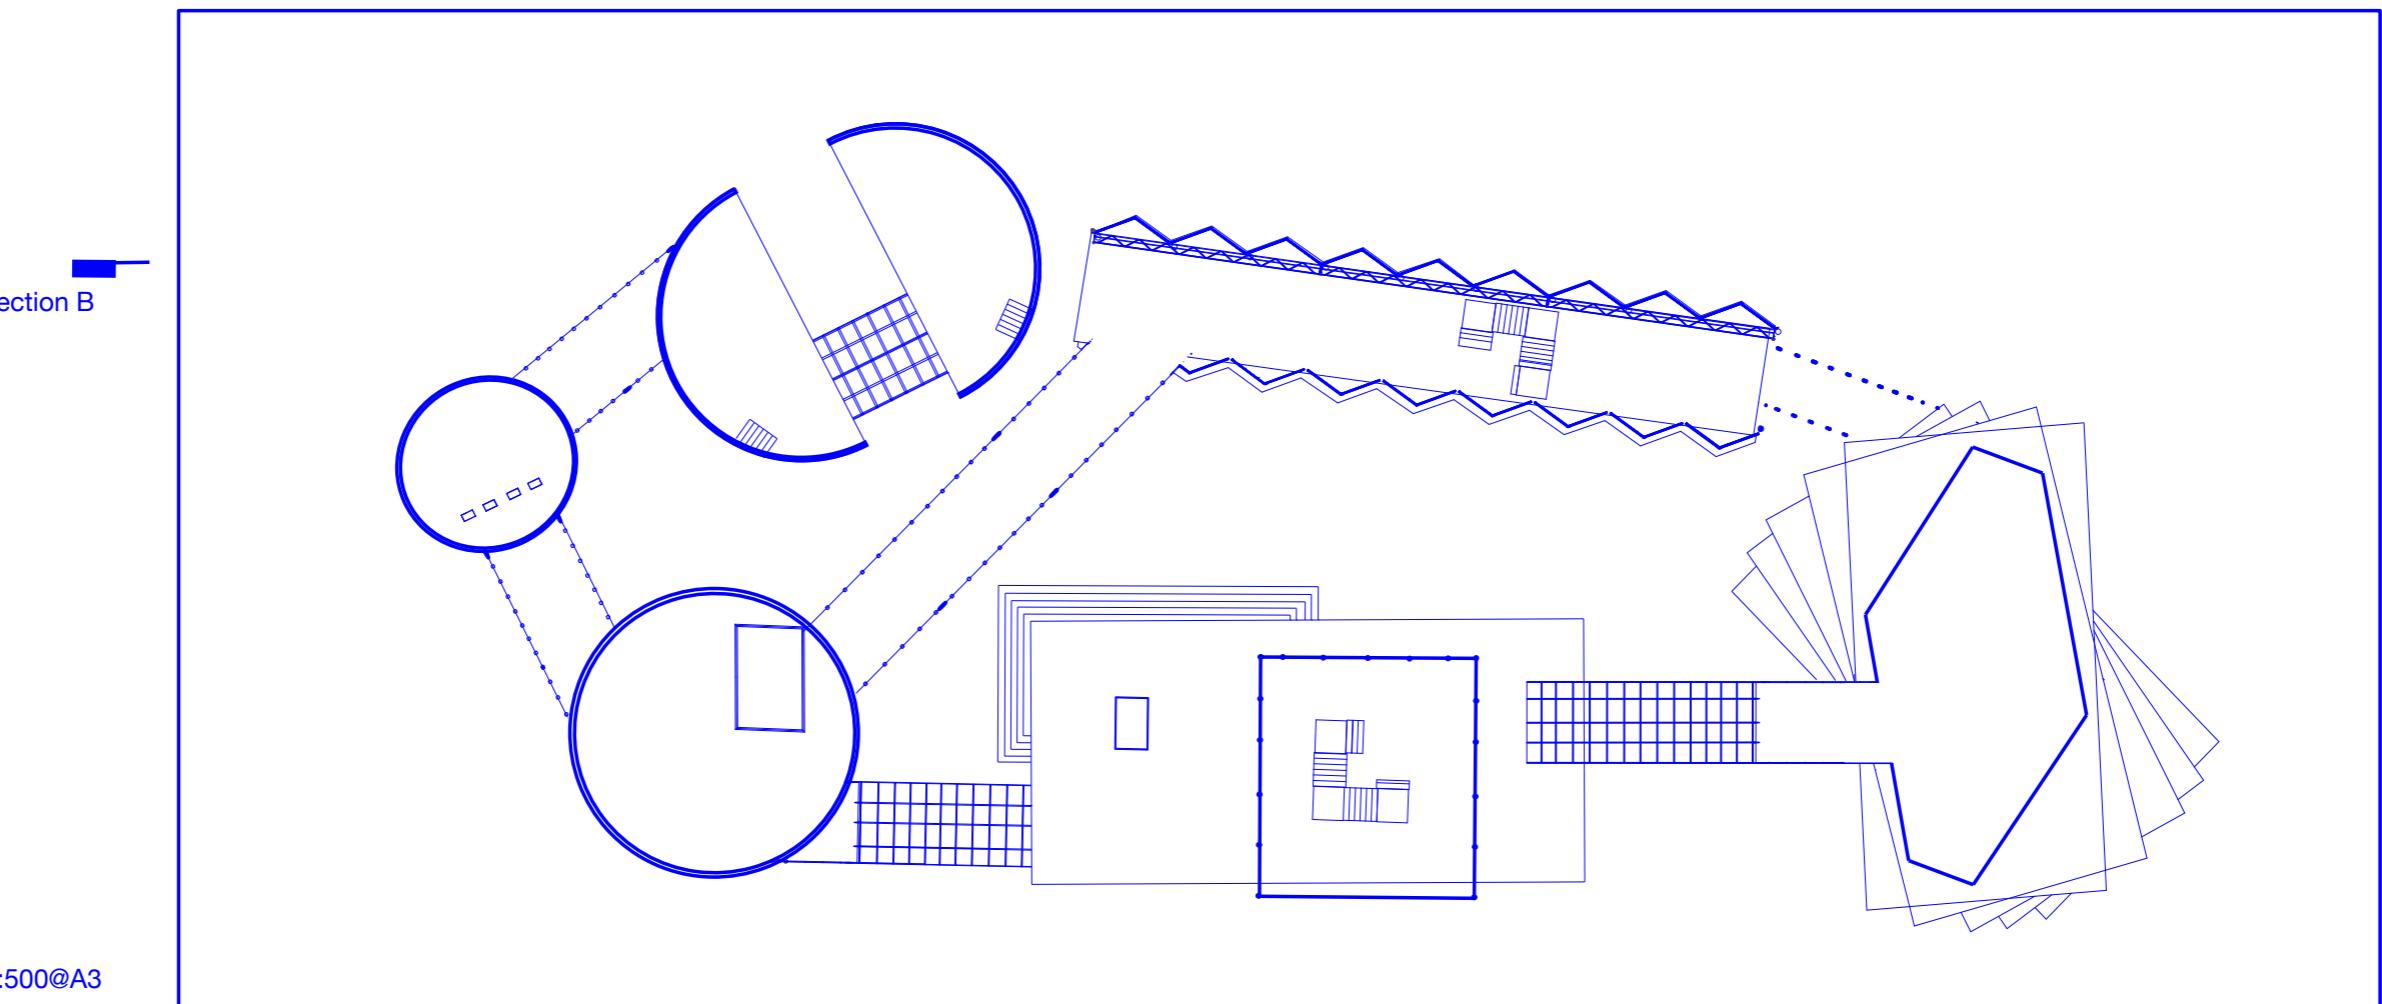

Perspective View 1

S

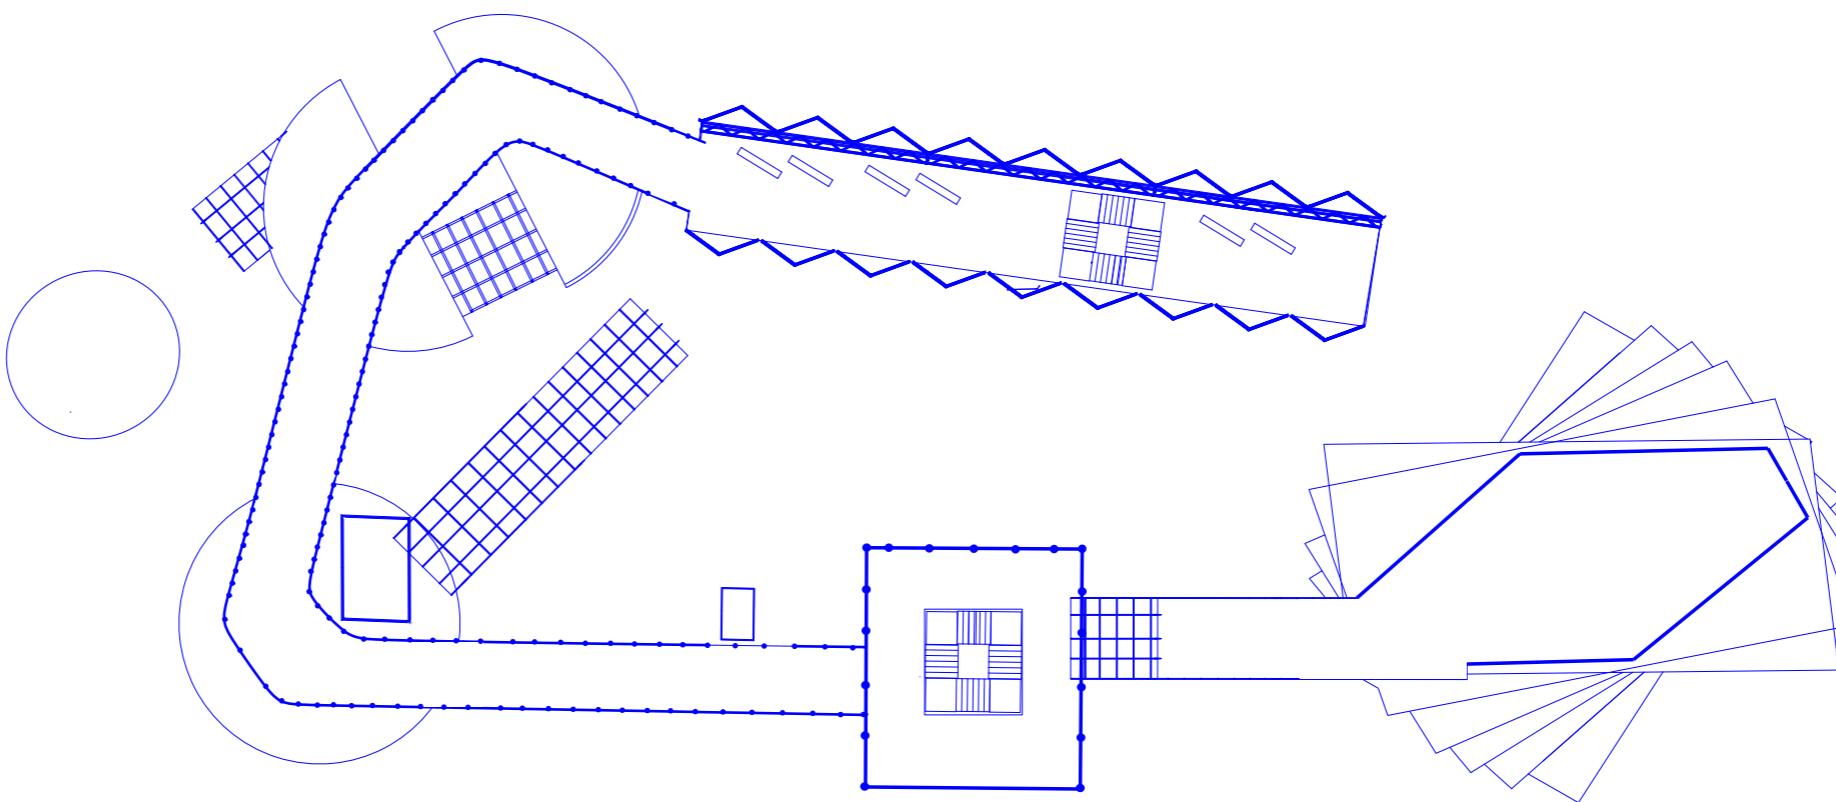

S

Section B

⌚ Lvl 2 Floor Plan 1:500@A3

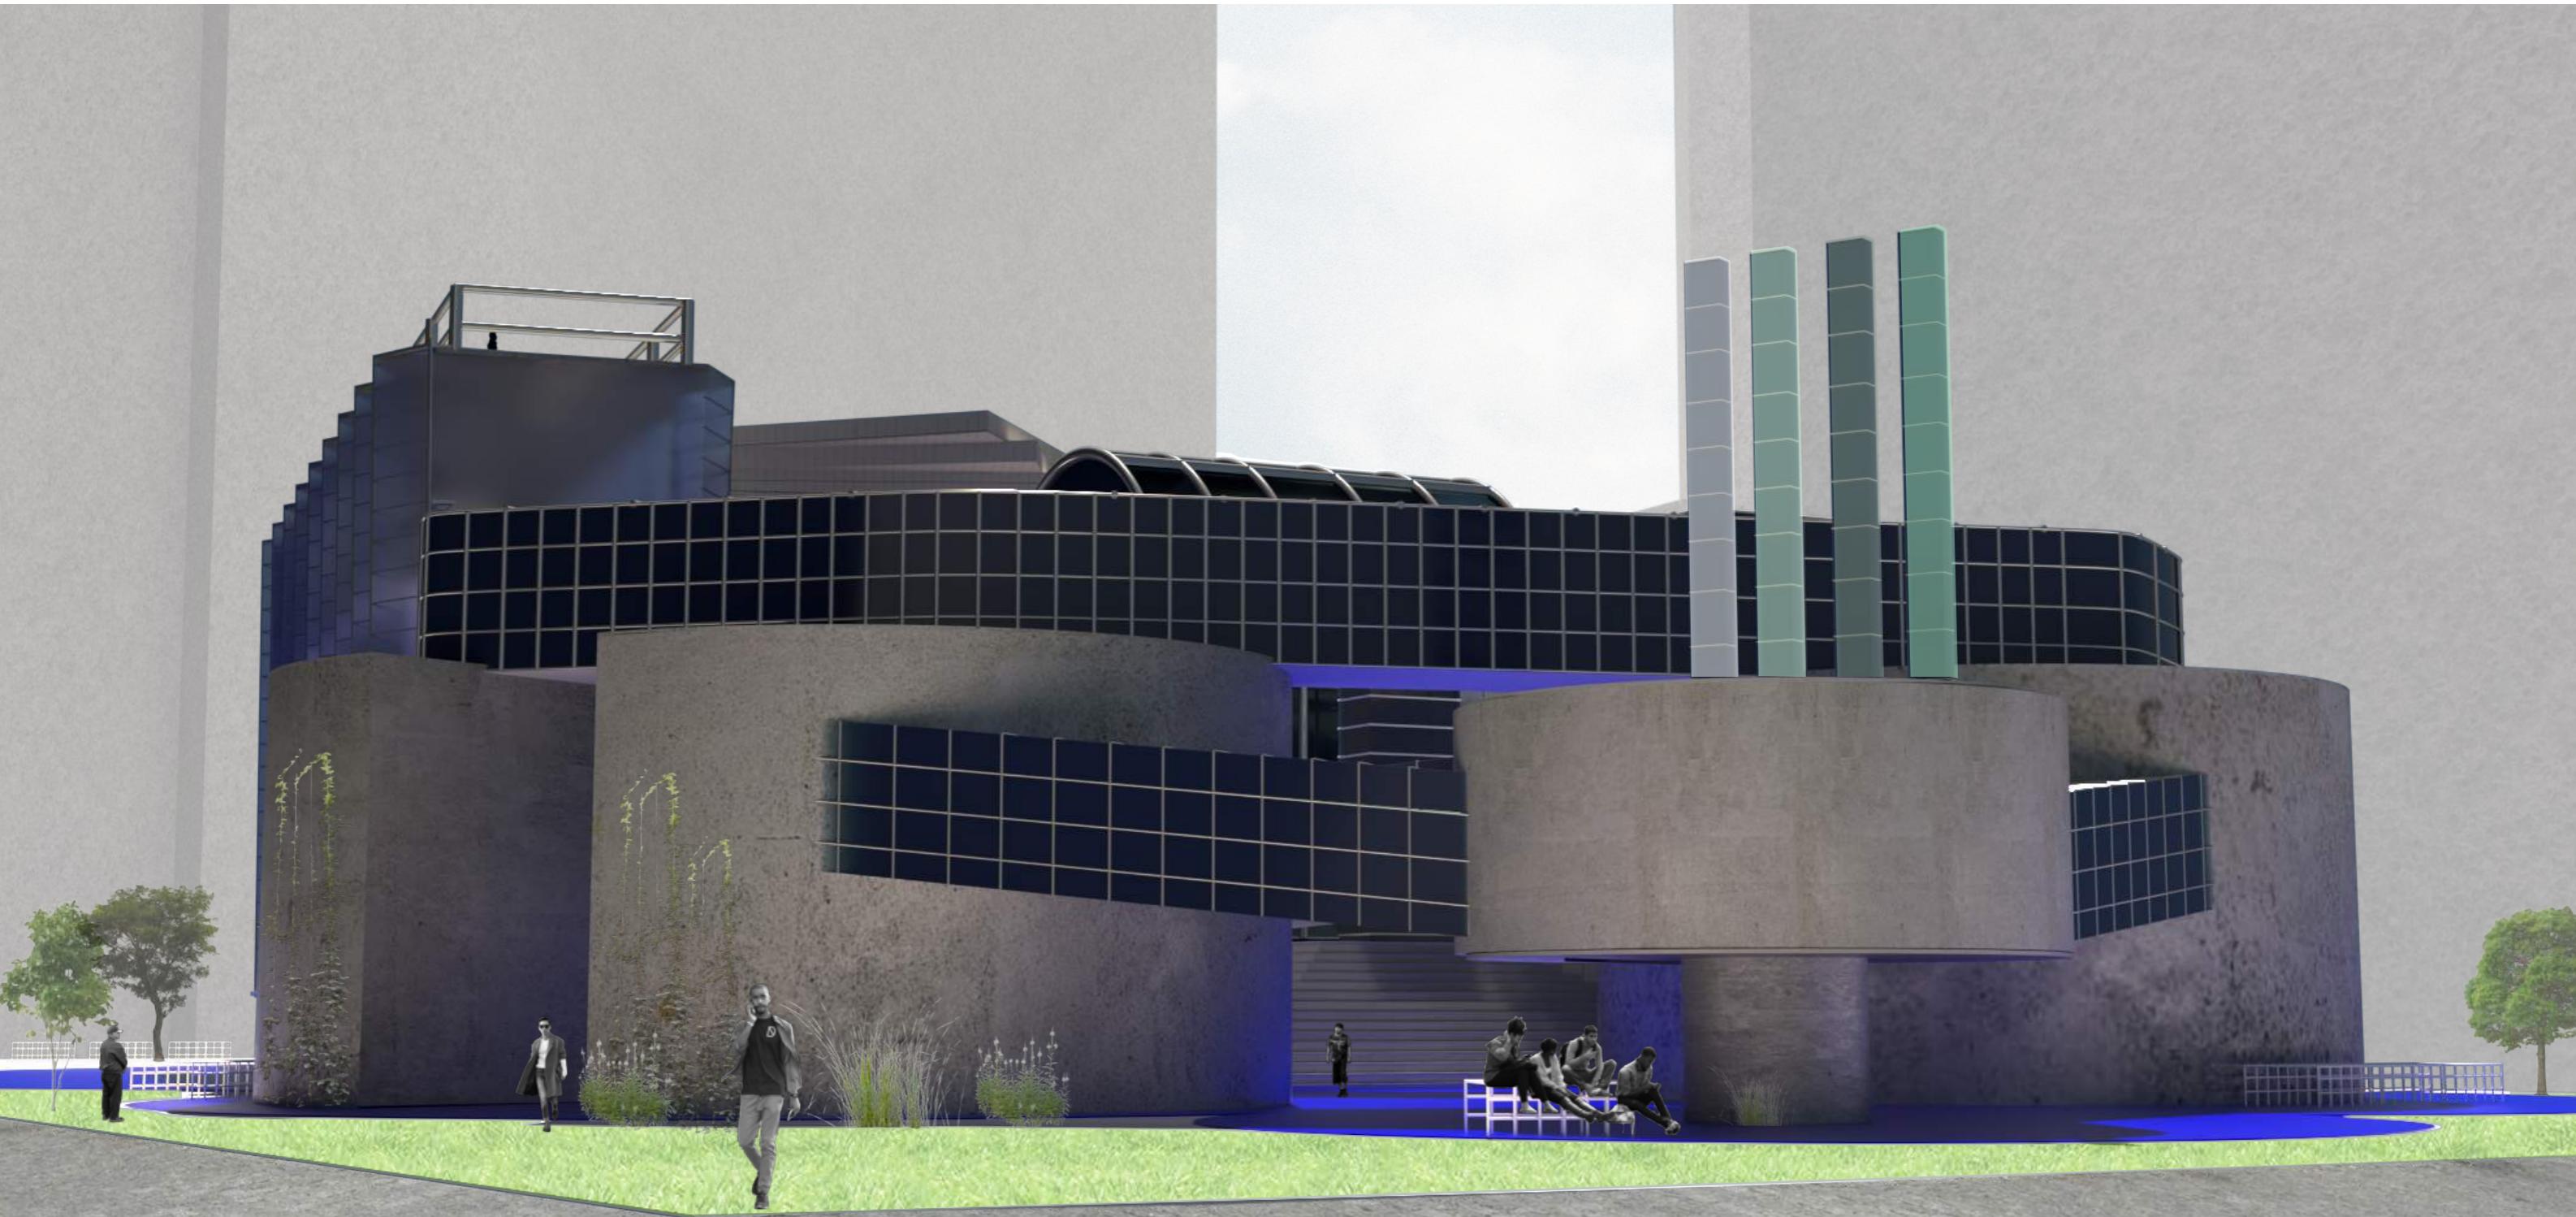

Section B

⌚ Lvl 3 Floor Plan 1:500@A3

S

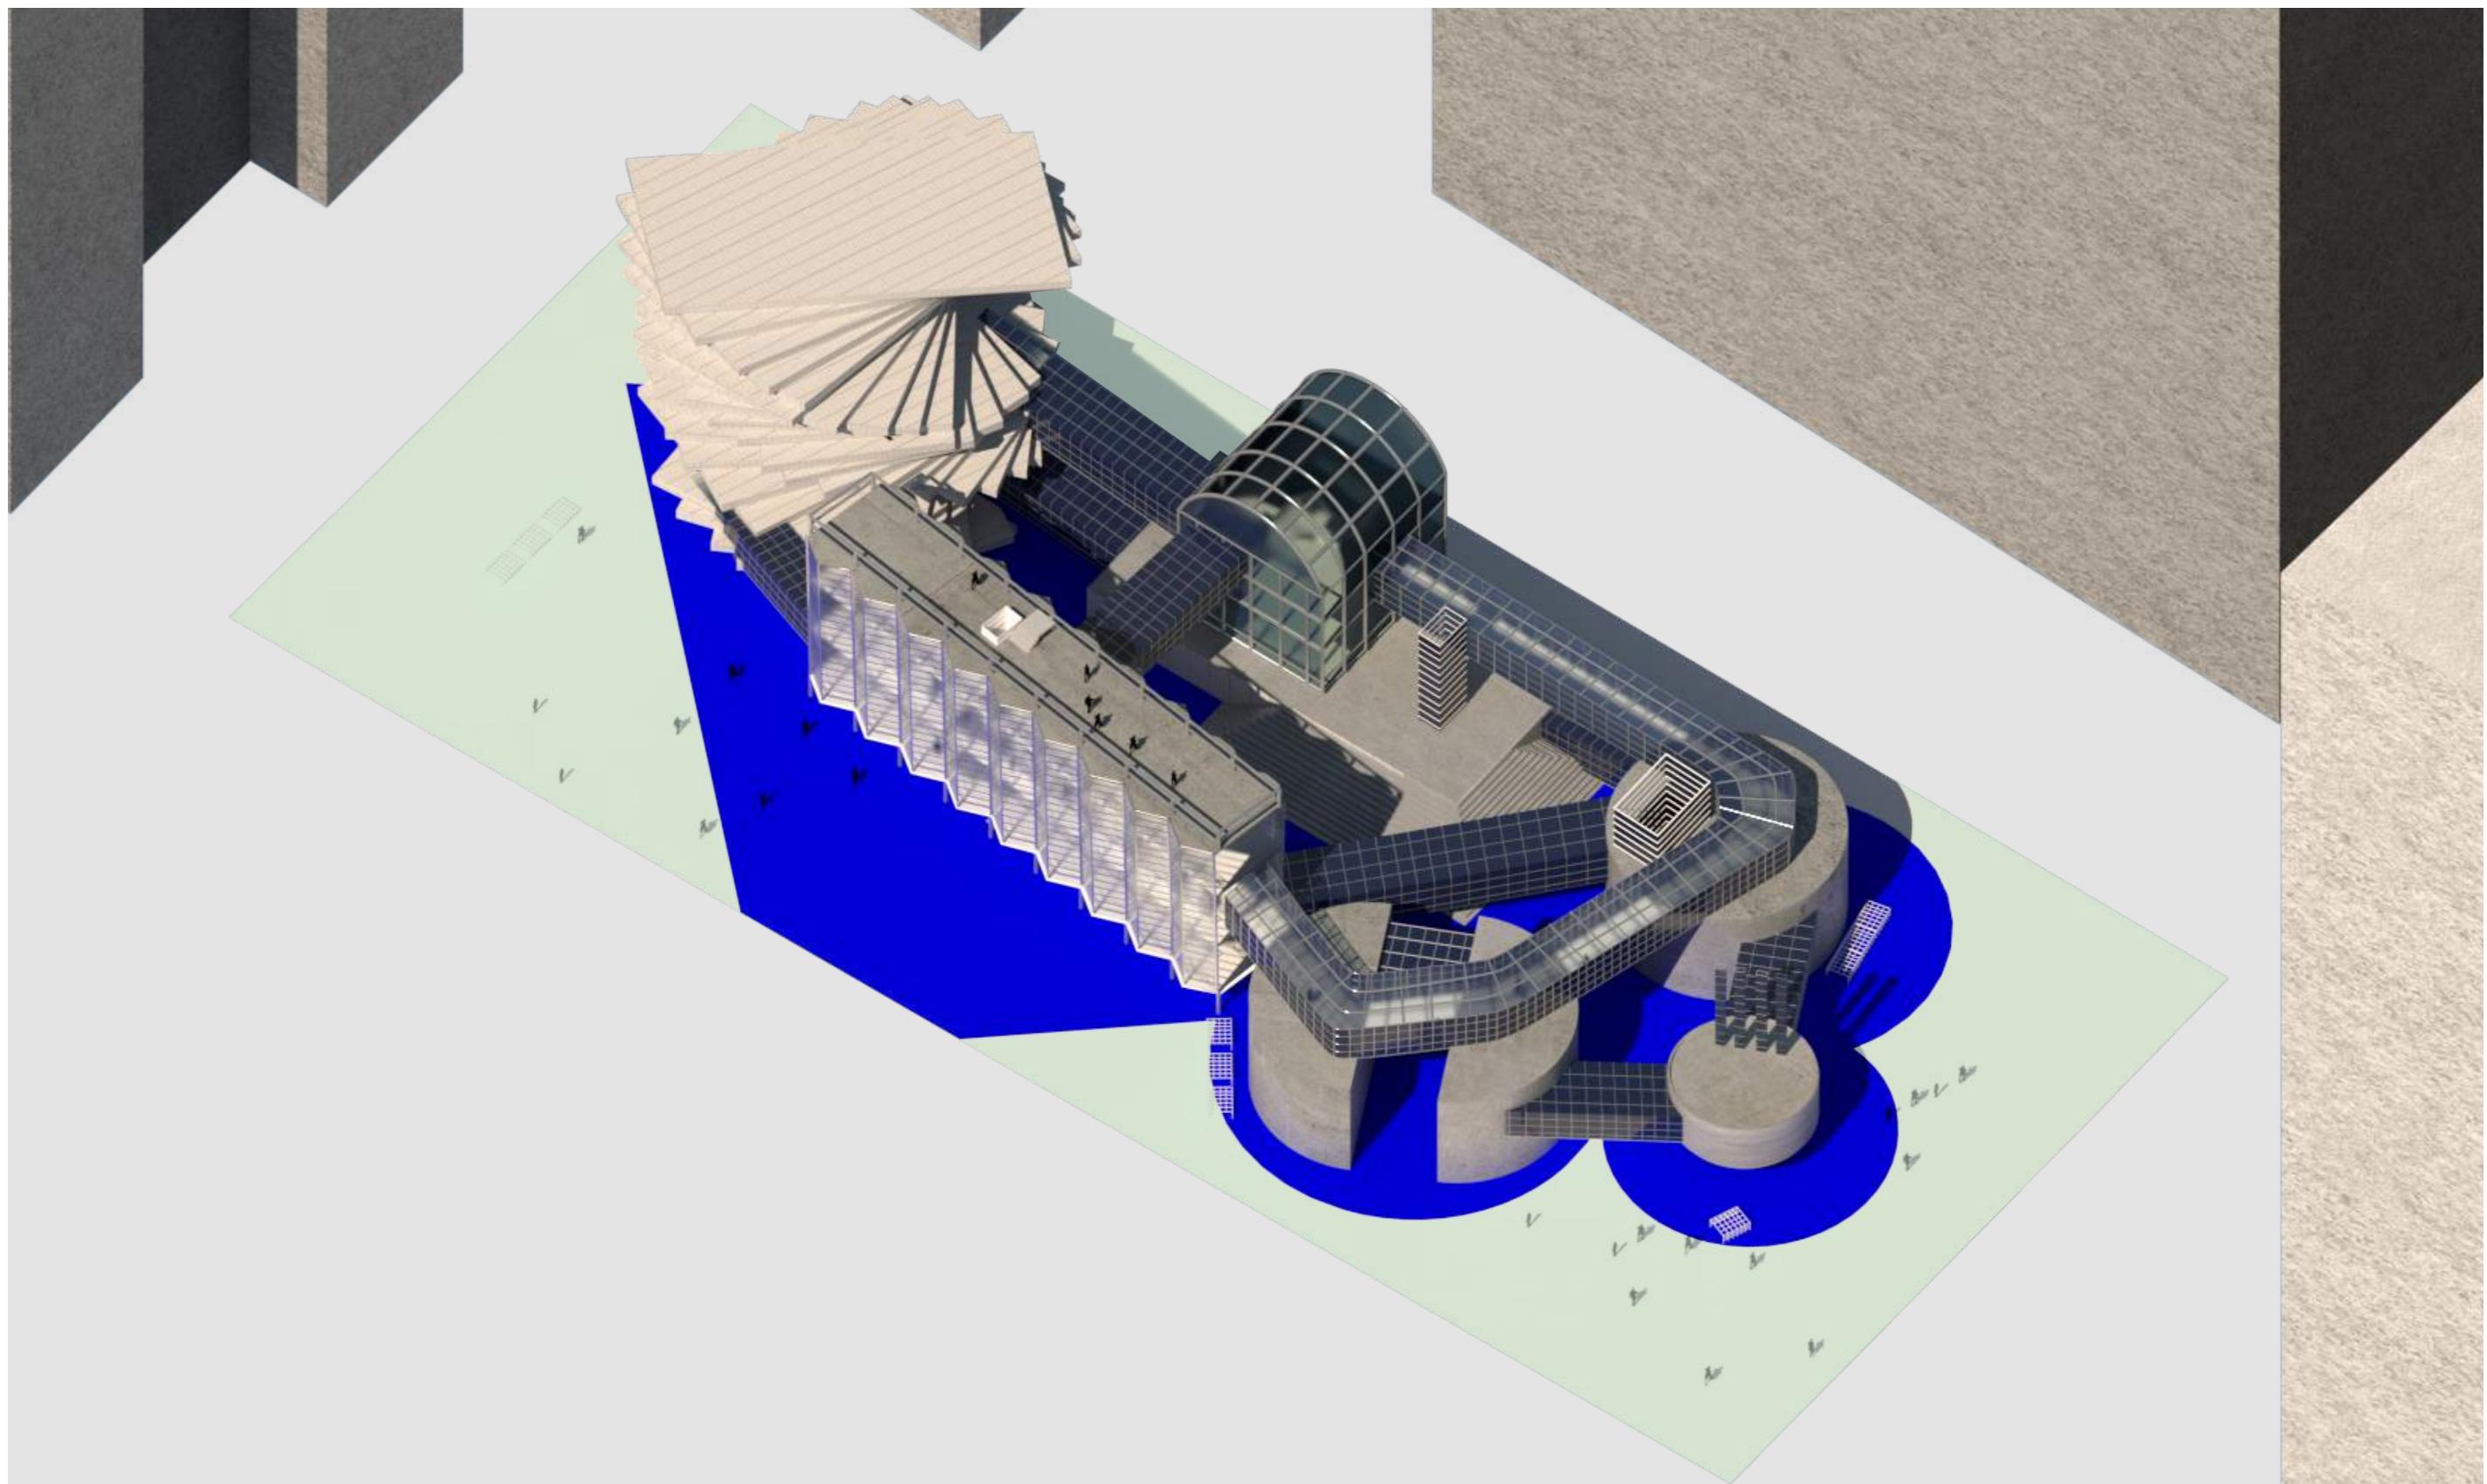

S
J

Perspective View 2

J
S

S

Zoe Braybrook
ARCHIVE C

Axonometric View

S

